To whom it may concern:

I would like to take this opportunity to write on the ability of John Krenson to identify problems, organize a team to solve them and then to present solutions in a professional manner.

As the Operation's Officer for Combined Forces Command-Afghanistan, I had the privilege to work with Major John Krenson. John was responsible for providing the complex, highly classified intelligence products for a staff headquarters coordinating all Coalition Force operations in a combat environment.

John's ability to identify the requirements and then form a group of individuals from several countries into a highly effective team, which provided countless products that he presented to senior military and governmental leaders, was truly remarkable. His presentations to the Commander of Coalition Forces were particularly exceptional. Also, John's ability to interact with various other sections increased the overall capability of the entire staff. Furthermore, John's ability to teach others to maintain that same high standard after he departed was tantamount to follow-on successes.

John demonstrated a sincere concern to make the team excel and to help others to excel individually. He will continue to excel in any endeavor.

Sincerely,

Edward B. Daly
Colonel, U.S. Army
